Celtic 7'5" center Tacko Fall needed a place to learn to swim, and the Charlestown Boys & Girls Club was where he dove in last month. Aquatics Director Colby Cahill (far left) and several beginner swimmers at the Club welcomed Fall and two other Celtics as they learned the backstroke, how to float and how to hold their breath underwater.

Supt. Brenda Cassellius has sped up the process by one year in expanding sixth grades in East Boston, thus opening up the Edwards Middle for more Charlestown seats earlier than expected. The Boston Public Schools (BPS) announced a plan late last week to expand six East Boston schools to K-6 configurations by the 2020 school year (next September), which is one year earlier than expected. With most students at the Edwards, which is a Grade 6-8 school, coming from East Boston, that opened up the Charlestown building for local uses earlier than expected. As part of her plan, the Edwards will not enroll a sixth-grade class in 2020. “Every decision we make must be rooted in community partnership and equity,” said Dr. Cassellius. “These decisions reflect the many conversations I’ve had over the last six months with families, school staff and community members. These changes will provide families with more predictability from Kindergarten to high school graduation and better position our schools to serve our students.”

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

For decades public health officials and the medical profession have warned Americans that our unhealthy eating habits have contributed to an epidemic of obesity, heart disease, diabetes, and cancer, among other ill-effects, in our country.

The irony of 21st century America is that our wealth does not equal good health. We eat foods that are more expensive to produce, but that are bad for us.

By contrast, the so-called Mediterranean diet, which consists of natural, unprocessed foods, and relies less on meat as a source of protein, has been shown to provide longer and healthier lives for those, regardless of their nationality, who adhere to it, even in the poorest countries of the world.

The hamburger, more than any other single food item, has come to epitomize the American diet. The opening of McDonald’s restaurants in foreign countries have been a cause celebre, even in France, the supposed capital of haute cuisine.

So it was with quite a degree of shock to Americans when Burger King launched its Impossible Burger, a plant-based “burger,” a few months ago.

However, the seeming absurdity of a hamburger-oriented, fast-food chain offering its customers a plant-based “burger” has given way to a new reality with the announcement this past week by the head of Burger King that the Impossible Burger has become the chain’s most successful new product launch in many years.

The Impossible Burger is not your hippy-dippy grandparents’ veggie burger. In our home we did a blind taste test, serving real burgers and the Impossible Burger (which we had bought in a grocery store) side-by-side without telling the unwitting participants that one-half (we cut the burgers in two) of what they were eating was not meat.

Not only could they not tell the difference between them (they were unaware that they were eating two different products), but they actually preferred the half that was the Impossible Burger.

Millenials are leading the way in this dietary revolution, but so too are the Baby Boomers, whose decades of bad eating have caught up with them.

If it is true that we are what we eat, this is a change that has been a long time coming.
Charlestown teacher receives funds from SONIC Drive-In

SONIC Drive-In concluded its annual Limeades for Learning Fall Voting campaign in support of public school teachers last month, and Charlestown teachers received funding to support their innovative and creative learning projects.

In partnership with nonprofit DonorsChoose.org and with the help of SONIC fans, one teacher in Charlestown received a combined $2,209 for necessary supplies to inspire learning in their classrooms.

“Our Fall Voting Campaign is a special time for us to celebrate exceptional public school teachers who make a difference in communities across the country, including those in Charlestown,” said Christi Woodworth, vice president for public relations for SONIC.

“With the help of our fans, we donated $1 million for teachers to have access to different teaching tools that otherwise wouldn’t be provided through traditional funding methods.”

Between Monday, Sept. 30, and Sunday, Oct. 27, SONIC fans voted for projects they found the most inspiring at LimeadesforLearning.com, ranging from pencils and paper to tablets and robotics kits.

In Charlestown, the following exceptional teacher at one school was among the public school teachers whose projects earned funding for much-needed teaching resources as part of the annual Fall Voting campaign:

- Margaret Arlauskas at Harvard-Kent Elementary School for the project “E SL Supplies!”
- Margaret Arlauskas at Harvard-Kent Elementary School for the project “Reach E SL Materials”
- Margaret Arlauskas at Harvard-Kent Elementary School for the project “Wilson Materials to Support Families and Students at Home!”

Since 2009, SONIC has donated $14,538,410, supported more than 17,570 classrooms, and provided necessary learning materials and teaching resources requested by teachers to impact more than 3,745,464 students in partnership with DonorsChoose.org.

people and adults drown due to not knowing the basics about swimming.

Then he met Colby Cahill, the Charlestown Aquatics director, and she was very interested in helping him and put him in a class with other beginners at the Club.

Gallagher said while it was fun, it was consistent with their mission to teach all kids (and now, Celts seven-footers) the basics of swimming.

“Our goal at the Boys and Girls Club of Boston is to make sure every kid can swim,” said Gallagher. “It’s a cornerstone of what we do now. We want kids to know that they can have fun in the water without being scared. Also, we want to be able to give them the skills to be safe if they are swept out at the beach or fall into a pool. It’s huge for our organization and has been for 15 years.”

But one turned into two, as Fall asked if he could come for a second lesson and bring some friends.

So, later in October, he came again with Celtics Semi Ojeleye and Grant Williams. Once again, with the young Club members side-by-side, the towering Celtics players learned how to kick off the side of the pool and hold their breath underwater. Some of the younger kids even gave them tips on how to float.

“Colby was so good with them, and really helped them to learn,” said Gallagher. “I have to say, though, when you’re 7’5” and in a three-foot pool playing sharks and minnows, the kids are too successful in getting past you. He was reaching out and tagging them and they couldn’t get by at all.”

Nowadays, Fall has been transferred up to the Portland G-League club, and Gallagher said they helped him find a Boys and Girls Club program up there to continue his lessons. He is currently taking lessons with Club members at the Portland Boys & Girls Club, Gallagher concluded.

should have a designated health care proxy and share their wishes for medical treatment at end of life. In many families, advance care planning is not a one-time conversation, but one that you may need to re-visit again and again.

For families who feel uncomfortable initiating these dialogues about wishes and preferences for health care, I often recommend the following method.

1. Meet with family members to discuss the future.
2. Discuss the options and make a decision.
3. Write down the decisions made.
4. Share the decisions with all family members.
5. Update any legal documents as needed.

This method can help ensure that everyone involved in making health care decisions has a clear understanding of what the patient wants and needs.

In Charlestown, the news was greeted with enthusiasm, particularly for parents of young children who are having difficulty landing seats for their children in the two neighborhood schools – the Harvard-Kent and the Warren-Prescott.

Monica Roberts, BPS chief of engagement, said the plan will allow the Edwards to phase out by 2021 – opening up the potential for more elementary capacity in the neighborhood, if that is what the community wants.

“The current would be to phase it out by the end of next school year,” said Roberts. “There would be no sixth-grade class in 2020, and the seventh and eighth-graders would continue to go there in 2021. By the 2021-22 school year, we’ll have the eighth-graders pick a high school and the seventh graders will pick a 7-12 school as part of our new alignment. We hope to be out to the community this winter and next spring to have conversations with the community about the future of the Edwards.”

Roberts said she should come as no surprise that the Edwards Middle would be phased out, as that has been announced previously. However, Supt. Cassellius has made it a priority under her reconfiguration plan to accelerate the plan for expanding East Boston schools to sixth grade. That also moves up the availability of the Edwards School – which most parents and educators in the Town believe will eliminate the issues with the headaches of school choice in Charlestown.

“We were planning on implementing these changes in 2021-22 school year,” said Roberts. “However, when Dr. Cassellius came on and began talking with the community, she decided she wanted to look at having East Boston move forward. Dr. Cassellius wanted us to continue assessing capacity and we found we were able to accelerate East Boston schools because of the physical capacity in the buildings to do the K-6 extensions. That moved up the plan one year ahead of time.”

Roberts said the Edwards plan would come under the citywide discussions around creating 7-12 school pathways – known as the high school re-design process. That will begin in December, and at that time the question of the Edwards will be brought to the Town.

“During that time, we’ll discuss where the Edwards sits with the K-6 and 7-12 model,” she said. “We’ll be having that conversation with the community then.”

Cassellius was expected to present this plan to the School Committee Wednesday night, which came after deadlines. More information on the process and meetings to come is expected after Thanksgiving.

Activists, families hope BPD jail overdose deaths can change policy

By Seth Daniel

One grieving mother and recovery specialists from around Charlestown and around Boston are hoping that shining a light on the overdose deaths of three young men while in custody at the South End D-4 Boston Police station will help to change policies around the city.

Within 90 days last summer, three young men died of drug overdoses while in the lock-up at the police station. At least one of the men, Shayne Stilphen, was seen on video struggling to stand up at booking, and then put in a jail cell. That video was first reported by Channel 5's Kathy Curran. Later, on the video, he’s seen getting pills out of his pockets and taking them. That is followed by more than an hour of him not moving, while officers allegedly did not check on him while passing by 10 times. When they did go in, it was too late, and Stilphen, 28, had apparently already died of a drug overdose.

The other overdose death at the jail was Cristhian Geigel, and a third young man also died, but his family wished his name to be anonymous.

“The goal here isn’t to blame anyone or get anyone in trouble, but to bring attention to this that happened and how devastating this is and that it is completely preventable,” said Recovery specialist Shannon Lundin, of MGH’s Charlestown Coalition. “The families just want people to know what happened and try to prevent any other families from going through it. There’s no blame here, but it could have been prevented, and it’s devastating to the families, and maybe this can spark some changes to policy citywide.”

Lundin had worked with Stilphen for several years as he tried to sober up in the Charlestown Drug Court program, and became friendly with his mother, Lynell Cox, of East Bridgewater, while trying to help him. Together, they planned a vigil for the three men on Oct. 26 in front of the D-4 Station on Harrison Avenue.

Lundin, who spoke at the vigil and helped Cox coordinate the vigil, said about 50 people were there to memorialize the men and draw attention to potential policy change.

“I would think having a medical professional there so when someone is book and are clearly intoxicated, they can be evaluated to see if they need to be brought to the hospital,” she said. “He was clearly intoxicated when they brought him in and he couldn’t even stand up, which you can see on the video. My position isn’t to blame the police, particularly at D-4 which is in the middle of (the biggest problems). He obviously needed medical attention. If someone were there to evaluate him and determine he need medical help, I think that would have been the best outcome.”

Lundin said she had been very active in trying to help Stilphen when he was at Drug Court – a special court program in some district courts like Charlestown that streamlines individuals into treatment and recovery in return for not prosecuting their offense.

She said Stilphen, who grew up in Weymouth, was intent on sobering up, but couldn’t turn the corner.

“[I advocated for him a lot and was on the phone with him all the time],” she said. “He struggled in and out in trying to get it together, but he had a desire to get sober. He was so caught up in that lifestyle that he couldn’t ever get out of it.”

Eventually, Stilphen dropped out of the program, and the next time Lundin heard about him was after he had died at the D-4 lock-up.

Good Shepherd School celebrates 10th Anniversary

By Seth Daniel and Marianne Salza

There can be no better endorsement for a pre-school than when the young students don’t want to leave.

That’s what many parents have experienced over the last 10 years at the Good Shepherd School on Warren Street, a school within St. Mary’s Church that celebrated its 10th anniversary on Monday.

For parents Aleta Mustone and Matt Engler, both of their children – Sebastian and Theo – were hard to pry away from the school at pick-up time each day.

“The teachers and staff are genuinely loving and nurturing; they knew our kids so well and were able to work with their strengths as well as address any challenges in the most positive, supportive way,” said Mustone. “The boys had fun every day - often wanting to stay ‘just a little bit longer, please.’ I wish every child could have such a positive start to their school experience.”

That was a common thread this week as students, parents, alumni and even Cardinal Sean O’Malley came to celebrate the Good Shepherd’s 10th anniversary.

“One of the reasons the school exists is to pass on faith to generations,” declared Cardinal O’Malley, who first visited the school during its dedication 10 years ago. “Science can help us understand the world around us, but it’s our faith that allows us to discover what our mission is. This is what a Catholic education is about: making the discovery that everything is a gift.”

The Good Shepherd School, an independent Catholic school, is one of the only Catholic pre-schools in the diocese, and it’s a credit to the community and Father Jim Ronan – who founded the school after careful study.

Ronan said after coming to St. Mary’s Church in 2004, he saw that Charlestown Catholic was closing, and there was a risk that there wouldn’t be a Catholic school presence at all in the Town. He embarked on several studies, looking at data and feasibility studies for the needs of the community.

“It became clear the best course of action was to support the biggest need, and that was a pre-school,” he said. “We were early on thinking outside the box on that — particularly a Catholic School with faith formation for little ones would be part of the curriculum.”

With some planning and a great fundraising effort, they were able to gut and build out the school in the basement of St. Mary’s, creating a model area for early childhood education. Ten years ago this month, they hired their first faculty and enrolled their first class – expanding out one year at a time. Now, they have four classrooms serving ages 2-5 under the direction of Jessica Maxwell.

“The school is now an independent school,” said Ronan. “It has its own Board of Directors and is not part of the Parish, but it is a Catholic school under the direction of the Archdiocese of Boston. However it is a free-standing school that pays rent to the Parish.”

Ronan said the Good Shepherd School was a response to the changing demographics of the Town – where newer people are moving in and staying to be part of the fabric of the community.

“The reality is the demographic of the Town has changed radically in the last 15 years,” he said. “The preponderance of people then were primarily Townies and a small number of new arrivals. That’s flipped around. I think the minority now are Townies and the new people are the majority. A lot of residents are young and have young families. You see the baby strollers every time you go out for a walk.”

He added that there are more weddings and baptisms, and attendance is up throughout the Parish – in addition to the numbers at the school.

“The numbers are much higher in 2019 than in recent decades,” he said. “It’s a new face on the Town.”

Cardinal Sean O’Malley, who presented a homily to the community, hopes that the school will inspire children with the love of God, and encourage them to give back to their neighbors, and exercise forgiveness.

Kennedy Center kicks off holiday gift drive for those in need

Help Charlestown children this holiday season, by participating in the Kennedy Center’s Annual Holiday Drive. Each year, the Center receives more than 300 requests for holiday assistance from families throughout Charlestown. For a small amount of money, one could dramatically improve the holiday season for an entire family. Many of the families served by the Kennedy Center are surviving on extremely limited incomes and struggle to afford even the most basic necessities. The holiday season can be particularly difficult for these families.

Help keep the holidays joyful for all by sponsoring a family or making a monetary donation. All proceeds go directly to Kennedy Center staff. After the holidays, those involved will receive a formal thank you letter and donation receipt for tax purposes. Monetary Donations and gift cards are also accepted. Cash will be used to purchase gifts for any wish lists that were not sponsored.

Please mail checks to John F. Kennedy Family Service Center
Attn: Holiday Gift Drive
23A Moulton St, Charlestown, MA 02129

Online gifts can be made at www.kennedycenter.org/donate. Please note the deadline to drop off gifts is Monday, December 16.

“We simply cannot do this work without the support and generosity of our community,” read a statement from the Center. “On behalf of the Board of Directors, staff, and families who serve, thank you. We encourage you to spread the word about the wonderful programs and services the Kennedy Center provides, and thank you in advance for your consideration and continued support.”

Walsh awards $500,000 to support Boston’s youth

Building on his commitment to investing in positive pathways for residents in the City of Boston, Mayor Martin J. Walsh today announced 20 organizations have been awarded funding through the 2020 Positive Youth Development Fund and Young Adult Development Fund, increasing the availability of development programs and providing positive opportunities for Boston youth and young adults.

“Community programs throughout the city provide opportunities to guide young people in a positive direction away from violence,” said Mayor Walsh. “By supporting their needs and future aspirations, these nonprofits help to support our young Bostonians’ futures, and improve the quality of life in our city and public safety in our neighborhoods.”

Funding priorities for this cycle were geared to programs that demonstrate understanding and use of the positive youth development framework and those that support marginalized youth populations that need specialized programming and services. This year, $400,000 was collectively awarded to further these programs in individual awards of $25,000.

The following Charlestown organization was granted the Youth Development Fund award:

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

Request for Proposals for the long term lease and redevelopment of Building 108 in the Charlestown Navy Yard

The Boston Redevelopment Agency (“BRA”), doing business as the Boston Planning & Development Agency (“BPDA”), is soliciting responses to a Request for Proposals (“RFP”) for the redevelopment and ground lease of the former Building 108 Power Plant Site (“Leased Premises”) located at the intersection of Third Avenue and Ninth Street in a portion of Parcel No.1 in the Historic Monument Area of the Charlestown Navy Yard within the Charlestown Urban Renewal Area, Project No. Mass. R-35. The Leased Premises consists of approximately 40,648 square feet of land area and is currently occupied by Building 108. Building 108 is expected to be demolished in the spring and summer of 2020 due to its deteriorating condition and the environmental contaminants present in the building. After demolition, the Leased Premises may carry on Activity and Use Limitation restricting certain uses as a result of contaminants that are not able to be fully remediated.

Redevelopment plans should be coordinated with the National Park Service’s adjoint property at Building 107. This RFP seeks to secure redevelopment of the Leased Premises for residential, research and development, commercial, office, or local retail uses. Design is subject to the Secretary of the Interior’s Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties, the Charlestown Navy Yard Design Guidelines for Reuse for the Historic Monument Area, and the Charlestown Navy Yard Program for Preservation and Use. Per these guidelines, new construction must be contained within the volume of the original massing (approximately 206 feet in length, 150 feet in width, and height ranging from 55 feet at the north elevation to 60 feet at the south elevation). This RFP further requires that any redevelopment of the Leased Premises be subject to and consistent with applicable zoning, the Charlestown Urban Renewal Plan, 41 CFR 102-75.455(c), the 1991 Municipal Harbor Plan and the 1990 Charlestown Navy Yard Master Plan.

The RFA expects a ground lease price proposal of at least $10 per gross square foot of area per year upon project stabilization. However, the BRA may consider an offer price below the asking price if the proponent can demonstrate clear and quantifiable positive value in a proposal that includes an offer for less than the appraised value. The Leased Premises is intended for disposition through a long term ground lease by the BPDA pursuant to the RFP. The Leased Premises is being offered as is, without warranty of any kind, express or implied. If concerned about the Leased Premises condition, legal or physical access and the maintenance thereof, property lines or boundaries or any other matter affecting the Leased Premises, prospective developers should investigate and conduct whatever due diligence and inspection deemed necessary. The RFP package will be available beginning November 20, 2019 at the BPDA, Boston City Hall, One City Hall Square, Room 910, Boston, MA 02210, or download the package by registering at http://www.bostonplans.org/work-with-the-bpda/rfps-rfp-bids. Completed proposal applications must be submitted as instructed and returned directly to the BPDA, Room 910, City Hall Square, Boston, MA by January 22, 2020, no later than 12:00 PM. Late proposals will not be accepted. A fee of $50,000.00 is payable upon submission of proposals, refundable for those proponets who are not selected. A site tour of the Leased Premises will be held on December 4, 2019 at 10:00 AM at the intersection of Third Ave and Ninth Street, Charlestown Navy Yard. Staff from the BPDA will be there to answer questions concerning this RFP; questions shall then be answered in the form of an addendum. For more information about this Request for Proposals, contact Morgan McDowell, Real Estate Development Officer at (617) 918-6250 or via email to: Morgan.E.McDaniel@boston.gov. RETURN OF TOWNIE SANTA WARMLY WELcomed

I was so glad to hear that Townie Santa, which was MIA for several years, is returning to brighten up the lives of so many homebound elderly folks.

A number of volunteers from many community organizations are uniting to bring back this Charlestown tradition that started back in 1982 when Gloria Conway from the old Charlestown Patriot got together with a number of community activists in the Town. Together, they wanted to do something for those who often feel so alone and forgotten during the Holidays, since so many only have memories of Christmas Past.

I was there at the inception of this Christmas gift to older Townies who could use a little company, a few presents and a nice hot meal, and we weren’t going to let them be forgotten.

I remember meeting downstairs at the old Harvard School (renamed the Mary Colbert Apartments). My parents loved this tradition and felt like they were still a vital part of the community as they aged. I delivered meal after meal over those first years and saw folks on the receiving end smiling with joy, just knowing they were being remembered.

Too often, good things eventually come to an end, and this is what happened to Townie Santa, too. He stopped coming to Charlestown, but the memory of all those good folk who shared their time to help others only makes us all happier. Charlestown was, and is always going to be a special community that truly cares about others around them.

My friend Kim Mahoney from the Bunker Hill Associates and the Warren Tavern said: “We are bringing back Townie Santa this year...Charlestown shines when we do things like this. It’s the way the community comes together...that’s the fabric of the community.”

I can still the faces of all community folk back who created Townie Santa almost 40 years ago because they knew the community needed it, and today, it is needed even more as more and more people seem to fall between the cracks.

I believe I was part of the last Townie Santa Christmas several years ago, and there were so many names I still remember who worked together year after year to make sure no one was forgotten during the holidays.

I hope a new generation of Townies can pick up the mantle of what worked so well, and I will be back doing my part again, a little older, as they say, but still there.

With the help of many, I’m sure the spirit of Townie Santa will rise again, and that the spirit of those who have left us will be with this year’s volunteers. And surely those of us still here will join in with all the newbies kicking off Part 2 of Townie Santa.

TURN IT AROUND CHARLESTOWN FOURTH ANNUAL THANKSGIVING DINNER

On Nov. 21, Turn it Around Charlestown will be celebrating Thanksgiving with a special dinner. They are looking for volunteers to cook and donate food and desserts to help make the celebration a success. Please contact Ginaya Greene-Murray if you are interested in joining the event. - How To Report A Problem Property Since taking office in 2014, Mayor Walsh has made fixing quality of life issues a priority in his administration. From investing in Public Works to making sure community policing is a staple in every neighborhood, we are making sure every neighborhood is clean, safe and a great place to live and work in. Unfortunately some properties in Boston need more help than others, and that’s why we are here. If you know of a property that fits one of the following criteria: multiple calls to 911, one that’s blighted or just a general concern, we encourage you to reach out to your neighborhood liaison.
Taking Care: Murray takes the reins at the Golden Age Center

By Seth Daniel

When Meaghan Murray returned to become the administrative coordinator of the Golden Age Center on Main Street, it was like a family reunion of sorts.

The born-and-raised Charlestown woman had an amazing Town pedigree and a large contingent of friends and family to match, so it was a seamless fit for her to take over after the long-successful run by Beverly Gibbons at the Golden Age.

“I’ve been working at the Age Strong Commission for a while, but Charlestown is my passion, my heart and my neighborhood,” said Murray, 38. “As soon as Beverly retired in January, I thought it was the best fit for me. It made sense. These folks here all knew my grandparents. My grandmother is my favorite person in the world. I used to come down here with them and it just felt like home.

“I had a sense of what it would be like working day-to-day in a center, and I wanted to be more full-time in one spot and wanted to be in my neighborhood and help these folks – many of whom are my friends’ grandparents and aunts and my aunts and family,”

Murray continued. “I couldn’t have asked for a better job.”

Murray started the job on the most sacred day in the Town, Bunker Hill Day, this year. However, before that she had been working as an advocate around the city to help seniors with social services, home visits, and pretty much any other thing they needed. The logical next step was to direct a center, and what better place than in her home neighborhood.

Kelly is the daughter of Mick Murray and Maribeth Kelly – with Maribeth also working at the Age Strong Commission and active in about everything in Town. She grew up on North Mead Street off Bunker Hill and attended St. Francis School (a Father Mahoney product, she says), Charlestown Catholic and Massignon High School.

Murray was a pioneer girl hockey player in the Charlestown Youth Hockey Association (CYHA), one of only two girls in the early days of the emerging girls hockey program.

“Back then, it was me and one other girl – Erin Brennan – and it was just the two of us and we would have to change in the referees room,” she recalled. “We played with the boys, but we also played Little League with them too.”

She took a post-graduate year at Hebron Academy in Maine, and then played hockey at New England College.

Beyond that, she said she attended the Boys & Girls Club of Charlestown, the Community Center and the Teen Center. She also was a lifeguard at the Clougherty Pool, and worked all the City summer jobs. It was a true Town upbringing for certain.

However, within that busy schedule, she said it was her grandparents that ignited her passion for working with older adults.

“My grandparents were a huge influence in my life,” she said. “Being able to help people is good, but to help somebody’s quality of life - to help them stay in their community is very rewarding. I think the reason I wanted to work with older people was because of my grandparents. My grandmother worked at the Kennedy Center for years and I saw what the neighborhood did for her and that probably started my love for this work.”

She also had a great example in her mother, Maribeth, who has been helping people in and around the Town for decades – something that Murray said she learned by example.

Now, administering the Center, which is one of only three free-standing senior-only programs in Boston, she said it’s been interesting learning the varied needs of those that come.

“It’s been interesting because we have age 65 to age 99 here,” she said. “It’s not one size fits all. You’re dealing with a group where some are very computer savvy, have iPhones and can use Uber. Then you deal with certain groups that wouldn’t know what to do with a smart phone and maybe struggle with a flip phone. It’s a lot of one-on-one. Sometimes just helping someone charge a phone can be very helpful to them. The great thing about this place is the younger folks are very good at helping the older folks. They do help each other.”

In addition, they have added Tai Chi, chair yoga and a Memory Cafe.

“We’ve been able to do a lot of new stuff down here, our attendance is up and we’re adding more,” she said. “The younger group wants classes, book clubs and field trips. The older adults sometimes just want to play Bingo and that’s ok too. It is varied and we are trying to bring services to everyone.”

Murray said they are open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and have lunch at noon on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. She said she hopes to fill the shoes of those who came before her.

“I have huge shoes to fill because Beverly did an amazing job,” she said. “She was an unbelievable advocate for the neighborhood and I hope to do the same.”

SPORTS (from pg. 4)

St. (4-1-0) sophomore wing Will Ahearn tallied a goal and 2 shots on net in the Lancers 5-3 triumph over UMass-Dartmouth… Salem St. (1-3-1) senior wing Rose Sullivan rifled 2 shots on net in the Lady Vikings 5-2 setback to Johnson & Wales…Amherst (1-0-0) sophomore wing Kelly Wrenn tallied an assist in the Mammoths 5-2 victory over Hamilton… TOWNIE ROOTS

On the hardcourt, Southern NH (3-1) freshman guard Adriana Timberlake tossed in 14 points and added 6 assists, 5 rebounds and 3 steals to lead the Lady Penman past Staten Island by a score of 91-50… On the ice, Stonehill (1-3-1) sophomore wing Charles Page scored a goal and blasted 4 shots on net in a 3-3 tie with St. Anselm…UMass-Lowell (7-3-4) junior wing Connor Sodergren notched a goal in the River Hawks 3-3 deadlock with UConn…

FANTASTIC FINISH

With a considerable “Townie” cheering section turning up the decibels, Nichols (6-4-0) senior wideout Eddie Evers wrapped up his Bison career by hauling in two passes for 11 yards and adding a solo tackle in a 35-7 setback to Endicott. A Dean’s List student, Eddie has been a fantastic ambassador as an alum of the Charlestown Youth Football program.
